YOU AIN'T NOTHIN' BUT A FARM DOG

Herding Chickens all the Time!

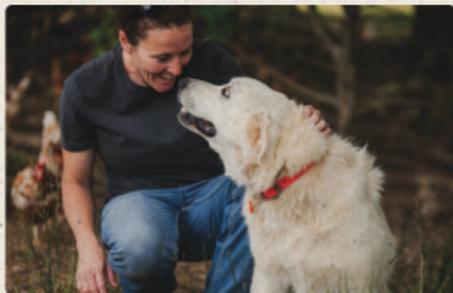

Not all animals on our farms have feathers. Some possess wagging tails and a knack for herding hens. A handful of our farmers are proud owners of working dogs who excel at keeping our pasture-raised girls safe and sound.

These loyal guardians happily patrol their property lines and guard the hens against predators. When they're not on watch, they use their herding skills to gently guide the flock, accounting for every last lady, as each day unfolds.

Farm dogs aren't your typical household pets. They're driven by purpose. Whether it's running the pasture or being a farmer's trusty sidekick during the daily chores, these hardworking canines are happiest when there's a task to tackle. But every so often, you'll find them blissfully sprawled out in the grass (with one eye open) keeping watch over their favorite feathered ladies.

Farm dogs make life a little easier for both our farmers and their hens, while never failing to provide unconditional love and companionship. It's no wonder they're a hen's best friend — and a farmer's, too.
